Who Is John W. Kern?

"Who is John W. Kern?" asks William E. Corey, the multimillionaire steel magnate who gained notoriety by marrying Mabelle Gilman, the actress.

In the first place, John W. Kern is an old fogey. He has such old-fashioned notions that he despises a man who would divorce his wife and the mother of his children in order to gratify an insane passion for an actress.

John W. Kern is one of those back numbers who places honor above dollars. He would not sell his soul for gold, even though the devil offered him all the yellow metal there is in the bowels of the earth. He has remained a comparatively poor man all his life rather than enter a combine to rob the people and drive competitors out of business. He never, so far as we have been able to learn, either founded a public library or endowed a college. Having lived an upright, wholesome, God-fearing life all his days, he has never felt the necessity of apologizing to his Maker or offering penance in the form of lucre for his sins.

William E. Corey is about as sharp a contrast to John W. Kern as could be found within the boundaries of the United States, with the possible exception of James S. Sherman, the other candidate for Vice President. No man who holds dear the honor of this country can contemplate the possibility of James S. Sherman becoming, through an act of Providence, the President of the United States without shuddering; whereas if John W. Kern should be called upon to step into the highest office he would grace it.

"Who is John W. Kern?" asks the faithless nabob who cast off his faithful wife, the woman who had bravely shared his days of poverty and had struggled with him to build up his fortunes, as a man throws away a lemon after he had squeezed all the good out of it. Such impertinence deserves no answer, were it not for the sake of calling attention to the brazen effrontery of men of Corey's stamp who had, through the medium of protected monop-ely, grown to be the greatest menace that confronts this nation to-day. Anarchy can be stamped out by force, but the insidious evil imposed upon this long-suffering people by men whom President Roosevelt designates very forcibly as "malefactors of great wealth," is even more to be dreaded than anarchy.

"Who is John W. Kern?" Why a plain, honest American citizen of the highest type, an unpretentious, clean living man, yet of scholarly attainments and commanding intellect. Had that purse-proud Pittsburgh millionaire read John W. Kern's masterly reply to the apology of James S. Sherman, he would have no need to ask, "Who is John W. Kern?"—The Albany, N. Y., Daily Press and Knickerbocker.

An Editor Revolt.

It is told of a Michigan editor that he grew tired lying about people in obituary notices, and then have people call him a hypocrite, so he wrote up one well known citizen follows:

Died—Aged fifty-six years, six months and fifteen days. Deceased was a mild mannered pirate with a mouth for whiskey and an eye for boodle. He owed us seven dollars on the paper. You could hear him pray six blocks. He died singing "Jesus Paid It All," and we think he is right as he never paid anything himself.

He was buried in an asbestos casket and his friends threw palm fans into his grave, as he may need them. His tombstone will be a favorite resting place for hoot owls.

Economy in Feeding.

Poultrymen do not care what the cost of the food is for their fowls as long as their is a proportionate profit. When there are no results from the hens to pay for it any kind of food is expensive. If certain foods are used because they can be purchased cheaply and no benefit is derived there is no economy in the use of them. The facts that fowls are fed mostly on grain is due to the fact that it is easily handled and more easily procured than any other food, but unless the hens lay better than on other materials the food is wasted on them. It is better to have no hens at all than to feed them materials which might be more profitably disposed of in some other way.

Take Notice.

All owing me must come and settle at once. All accounts not settled by Oct. 1st, will be put out for collection Mrs. Sallie Bradshaw.

Late Sitters.

It is not always a good plan to break up the late sitters. When a hen becomes broody she has reached a point where incubation is essential to her success as a source of profit and to deprive her of hatching a brood delays her.

When a hen becomes fat she is inclined to sit as the excess on her body will maintain her during her fast while she is on the nest. The process of incubation is also a period of rest during which time she recovers her former condition and comes back to laying and usually does excellent service. Let the hens sit if they so desire and they will lay again before the winter is over. Great care must be exercised in assisting her to rear her chicks. That is where the profit goes when hens sit in winter.

Where orchards are planted exclusively for commercial purposes and not merely to furnish a family supply, the matter of fertility is usually looked after in some systematic way; but the ordinary farm orchard is often completely starved out by the raising of regular grain crops among the trees—such as corn, wheat and oats. This is a ruinous custom, for the combined drain of both trees and crops quickly exhausts the soil to a point where it is impossible for the trees to bear good fruit. The only way to correct such a condition is to provide fertilizers that will furnish all the elements of plant food and to reserve the orchard exclusively for the use of the trees.—Ex.

Mr. Robert Fox, of Marksbury, through his attorney, Harding and Rawling, has filed suit against the town of Danville seeking to recover $10,000 damages, which it is claimed was sustained by the defendant last Spring. While driving along Lexington street the 5th of last June, Mr. Fox's horse took fright at the steam street roller and became unmanageable. Mr. Fox was thrown out and sustained a broken foot and ankle. It is claimed that proper care was not exercised in operating the machine. Of course the town will attempt to show that hundreds of horses passed the street roller daily without becoming frightened and that Fox's horse was responsible for the damage.—Danville Advocate.

It has been shown by experiment that most disease germs will be killed by direct sun light in a few hours, by diffuse light, as in a room in a few days, and in rather dark stables and basements in several weeks. The logic, therefore, is to secure the greatest amount of light that is possible in the stable. With light there be ample cubic content for ventilation. Sunlight and air are the cheapest disinfectors for horse stables, cow stables, sheep pens and hog pens; if given an opportunity, they will work continuously.

The county unit bill passed the Indiana Senate by a vote of 37 to 17. Three Republicans voted with Democrats against the measure. It is now before the House where the hottest fight is expected. It has passed the House.

Judge Wells, of Calloway county, swore that he was positive of an organized band of night riders made up of the criminals and lawless class, which was taking advantage of the tobacco troubles.

The faculty of the Kentucky University are anxious as to the whereabouts of Willis E. Smith, a college student, who has been missing for a week. The missing student's family advance the theory that he has met with foul play.

The residence of Charles Ballare in Louisville was entered by burglars, but they were discovered before they could get away with any booty. They made good their escape although the house was surrounded by police.

Nat Goodwin has sued for a divorce from Maxine Elliott. She is said to be the most beautiful woman on the stage. Goodwin has lived in Nevada six months in order to institute divorce proceedings.

The daylight special north-bound the fast train on the Illinois Central between St. Louis and Chicago, was wrecked near Springfield, Ill. One was killed and several were injured.

People's Cure for Stomach Ills

It would be folly to say that a person should always be his own doctor. There are times when one cannot be too quick in consulting a competent and reliable physician, but the fact does remain that there are many ailments that can be cured at home at very little expense. Such remedies can be bought at any first-class drug store for a small sum.

Among the diseases that can be effectively treated at home are such as pertains to the stomach, liver and bowels, like constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, flatulency, sour stomach, bloated stomach, sick headaches, heartburn, etc. For these troubles there is no better remedy than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound, and among its staunchest friends are the doctors themselves. In such troubles they know they have nothing better to offer than the ingredients contained in this remedy, and hence the liberal ones advise their patients to take it. It often happens that at the commencement of an attack some people hesitate to take such a simple remedy, and run to a doctor, but after trying various doctors they finally take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and have their confidence rewarded by a cure. A good case in point is that of Mr. Herrin, of Lawrenceville, Ill., who suffered from what the doctors called catarrh of the stomach. He was given up to die by three leading physicians. He had no appetite, couldn't digest what little he did eat, had severe pains in the stomach, and finally, moments when he himself thought he would die. Ultimately he was advised to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and did so, and now he is entirely cured and has gained 30 pounds. He naturally advises all sufferers from weak stomach to use it. It can be had in 50 cent and $1 bottles, and results are absolutely guaranteed or money is refunded.
